About A. J. Fisher

A. J. Fisher was founded in 1925 by Archibald J. Fisher. Archibald was a seaman who plied the Oceans and Great Lakes as a chief engineer. Mr. Fisher ran the business until he passed away in 1957. Raymond Irwin bought the business at that time and in 1960 Robert Irwin, his son, joined him when he left the service. Robert took over A. J. Fisher when his father retired in 1974. Robert continued A. J. Fisher until 2001 when he retired.

A. J. Fisher has been owned by William Partridge since 2003. Our goal is to maintain the fine quality ship model kits produced for over 90 years and to update and reissue over 20 of the original A.J. Fisher classic solid hull ship model kits. The A. J. Fisher fittings listed in this catalog are cast in pewter unless otherwise noted.

Whether you are about to begin your first model or if you have been building models for years we hope there is something in the A. J. Fisher ship model line of kits that will help you in creating your models. For the scratch model builder we offer a wide selection of fittings, supplies, plans, and cases.

Our commitment is to help you reach your modeling goals!

"Dancing Feather" Boston Pilot Schooner 1853

The Dancing Feather was designed by Dennison J. Lawlor and built in East Boston at the Winde & Clinkard shipyard in 1853. She was designed with a clipper style bow that was popular with the "sharpshooter" class fishing schooners and raked mast, reminiscent of the famed Baltimore Clippers. She worked in the competitive Boston Pilot trade for several years and eventually was sailed to California where she was engaged in the pilot and salvage trade.

"John McKeon" New York Pilot Schooner 1838

The John McKeon was built on Long Island, New York by Isaac Webb in 1838. She was one of the larger pilot vessels built by the Isaac Webb ship yard with an overall length of 78' and a beam of 20' 7". Due to the competitive nature of piloting, boats had to venture further and further out to sea in order to obtain work. These boats needed to be simplistic and easy to handle since the head boat handler was the only man left on board after she was "manned out" and returned to the harbor. The John McKeon had a short and tragic life, going down with all hands during a hurricane in July 1839.

"Miss Lou" Biloxi Schooner 1919

During the period from 1870 to 1930, the shipyards of Biloxi, Mississippi produced over 253 sailing schooners for fishing and the freight industry. The Miss Lou represents the apex of traditional flat bottom centerboard Biloxi style schooners of the Gulf Coast. She was built by the famed boatyard of Anson Hoiley in 1930. She measured 70' long and weighed 42 tons and carried Hoiley's famous clipper bow and curved transom. The Miss Lou story came to an official end when she was broken up in 1971.

"Lark" Baltimore Clipper 1812

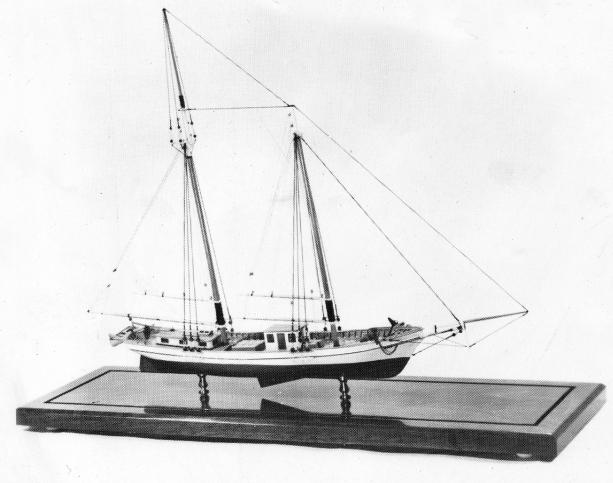

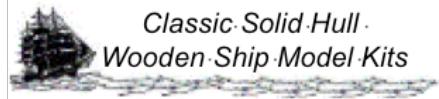

The Baltimore Clipper traces its roots as far back as the 1730's. These sharp, fast and weatherly vessels reached their zenith in design around 1810. So successful was the design that a single class was declared for this naval model and from 1813 to 1854 most naval sloops, brigs and schooners were designed with the Baltimore Clipper in mind. William Doherty a leading naval designer from 1812-1837 is considered the father of the Baltimore Clipper Model. This model of the Lark is a typical Clipper/Privateer of her time, carrying a battery of six-6 pounders and one 12 pounder.

"Challenge"
Great Lakes Schooner 1852

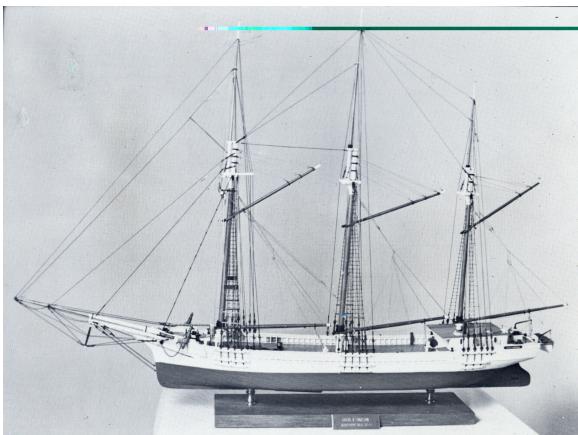

Before the present day 600 ft. bulk freighters all shipping was carried on schooners. The first distinctive lake schooners were the shoal draft, centerboard, "clipper" type vessels introduced by William Bates, of Manitowoc, Wisconsin in 1851-52. While on the stocks, the Challenge raised many questions from other local builders, but after her launch she proved to be one of the great success stories, so much so that larger versions were introduced such as the "Clipper City" and the "Montowoc." For many years the two masted clipper schooner monopolized the lakes trade until they grew so large it was necessary to rig them with three or four masts.

"Lucia A. Simpson"
Three Mast Great Lakes Schooner
1875

The Lucia A. Simpson was built in 1875 by Rand & Burger in Manitowoc, Wisconsin and was one of the last full-rigged schooners of the Great Lakes. In May of 1929 she was disabled in a squall off Algoma and then towed to Sturgeon Bay for repairs. On Dec. 3, 1935, a fire swept the "graveyard of ships" of the Sturgeon Bay Ship Building Company and destroyed her.

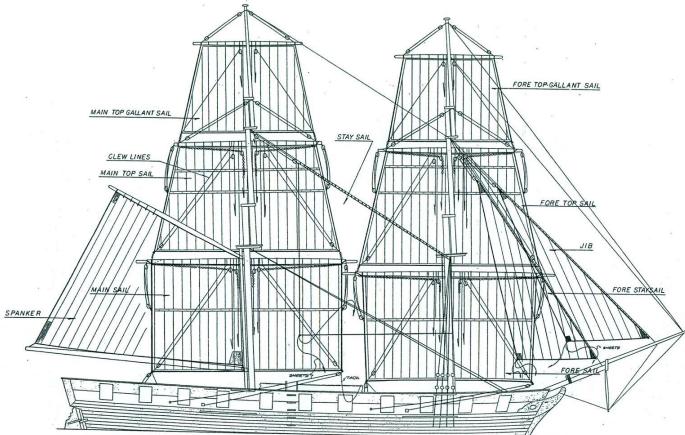

In the 1870's there were from 1700 to 1800 of these Lake Schooners of various sizes engaged in the lake trade, carrying coal, ore, grain and general cargo. They were a type built solely for the lake trade; practically all of them had centerboards.

Brig "Niagara"

Oliver Perry's Flagship 1812

The Niagara was the last of 6 ships built in a bay of Lake Erie. She was launched on July 4th 1813 by a technique called kedging, using her anchor to pull her onto a sandbar that protected the bay where she was built. During the Battle of Lake Erie in 1813, Commodore, Oliver Hazard Perry was forced to move from the Lawrence to the Niagara making her his flagship. On the Niagara he secured victory over the British which ensured American control of the Great Lakes during the War of 1812. In poor condition, the Navy allowed her to sink in 1820. In April of 1913, the Niagara was raised from Misery Bay and went through several restorations. She is one of two remaining vessels that served in the War of 1812.

"Champion" Great Lakes Tug of 1868

The Champion was said to be the largest tug ever built for fresh waters in 1868. Built by Campbell and Owen of Detroit, she possessed very comfortable accommodations for officers, much better than had been seen in the past. The Champion is known to have drawn eight schooners heavily loaded with wheat in a record tow of 1881. She met her demise on September 15th, 1903 as she burned to the water's edge. At this time she was owned by H. W. Baker of Detroit. She was towed to a reef near Gibraltar by the little steamer IAN, where she sank in about 10 feet of water.

A year later much of her fittings and machinery were removed. But her hull was seen as a total loss and not considered worthy of repair.

"Trawler"

The steam trawler was used for fishing by dragging a wide mouth fishing net over the sea bottom. During the war the trawlers were used as mine sweepers and patrol boats to protect our harbors.

"Edna G"

The Edna G was built in 1896 by the Cleveland Ohio Ship Building company. She was one of the most powerful tugs of the time. The tug is 110 feet long, 23 feet across the beam and draws 15.5 feet of water. She was named after the daughter of then president of the railroad Jacob Greatsinger. She operated out of Two Harbors all her life, except for two years 1917-1919, during WWI when the government requisitioned her to move barges and troop ships out on the east coast.

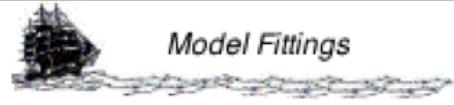

In 1974 the Edna G. was placed on the National Historic Register. The re-fitting of the great lakes freighters with bow thrusters and variable pitch propellers eliminated the need for tugboats in the harbors.
